The Murray Hill Hotel

In the 1850s, an English visitor to New England noted that turkey was to Thanksgiving what roast beef and plum pudding were to Christmas back home. It was a neat division, and it largely held.

But not everywhere. In 1891, the Murray Hill Hotel on Park Avenue put ribs of prime beef on its Thanksgiving menu, right next to the turkey. Plenty of other 19th-century American menus did much the same.

We're a British steakhouse in America, so we're following the Murray Hill's lead. Prime rib, cooked slowly on the bone, with Yorkshires, bone marrow gravy and all the trimmings. The turkey we'll leave to you.
